

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I am an Englishman, a Catholic, an out-and-out Papist, baptised beneath the Agates' Crowning Dome in Rome, and condemned by Leo XIII. We Englishmen are positively sickened of the ultra-Hibernianism which is entering upon our sacred rights. "No English need apply" should be inscribed on the portals of the Catholic Church in Australia. A perusal of the illustrious Benedictine Dom Norbert's book on "The Irish Blight on Catholicism in Australia," as set forth in the history of his order—an English foundation—in Australia, provides evidence enough and to spare that Dr. Mannix, and his disciples, too, will drive many baptised Catholics to indifference, if not into schism. Hence every Catholic who loves his Church and its ancient landmarks should support ex-Major-General Sir Charles Rosenthal in his efforts to free our Empire of the enemy in our midst, and thereby preserve the Faith of our Fathers from its rebel foes. Fall in! Rally! Do it now!

I am, etc.,
BEDE CUTHBERT BELLARIS, M.A.,
ex-British Expeditionary Forces.
